He had got McDoweil's force, including fligstles, probably, between Jackson's rear and Lougatreet's front, and had also all the rest of his sermy well up, within supporting distance. Thus it continued through the balance of the afternoon.

MUNTING DOWN POPE.

One avowed purpose of the rebel cavalry raids to our rear, is to expture Gen. Pope in person. Their mest reckless and daring officers have gone systematically to work to accomplish this purpose, and Gen. Pope will need to exercise more prudence than was his custom a couple of weeks ago, or they will need to exercise more prudence than was his custom a couple of weeks ago, or they will succeed. It is something that might well make one nervous to have and a fate nanging over one's head, as Jeff. Davis has proclaimed shall be Gen. Pope's, and to have the oest caralry of the continent on one's track, foll wing like a sleuth hound, and persistently endeavoing to bunt the man down. Of late, Gen. Pope has sufficed his headquarters every hight, as a necessary precaution against those attempts, and, when he is passing over portions of the field of operations where bodies of troops are not within supporting distance, a considerable force is kept out in advance and on other side of the intended route, scouting the country and farrowly watching the approaches by which a brigade of rebel cavalry might again come everyling in.

FLANS OF THE CAMPAIGN NOT CAPTURED.

FLANS OF THE CAMPAIGN NOT CAPTURED.

It is not true, as recently stated in some accounts of the affair, that in the recent descent on Gen. Pope's baggage train, his charts, plans of the campaign, accounts of forces, and other papers of that nature, were captured by the robels. The effect of such a capture would have been terrible; but general Pope's private secretary, who was present and taken prisoner, but subsequently-acaped and came up to Alexandria to-day, positively asserts that the rebels got none of the important papers, and that what they did get will prove no serious loss to us or advantage to PLANS OF THE CAMPAIGN NOT CAPTURED.

I would again suggest that citizens of each county form sanitary associations for the purpose of supplying systematically such articles as are readed, and in order that they may reach the proper points; that the person who has charge of each county will correspond with Col. John Williams, commissary geners), as Springfield, as to the quantity and kind that can be furnished weekly.

Numerous as dilberal contributions have kind that can be farmished weekly.

Numerous and liberal contributions have been made in various articles and some money, but up to this time the systematic arrangements have not been made by which it can continue throughout the fall and winter. Many persons who cannot contribute in stores, will, I doubt no, be willing to contribute money. To such persons I can give the assurance that Colonel Williams is a gratiemen of the highest reputation for integrity and superior business capacities, and that all such contributions will be fatisfully applied to the purposes for which havy are donafted.

There is no truth in the report industriously circulated by pro-slavery prints, that he has been superseded. He was relieved at his own request by the sceretary of war. During his administration in Arkansas, he has measumited at least 3,000 slaves. His successor is Gen. Steele.

The Von Phul arrived from Momphis this morning, and brings but little news worthy of telegraphic mention.

A SMARHING BURNERS, Upon Saturday

We regret to suscense to our readers the death of Mr. Philyer L. Wells, of this city. It will be recollected that about six months shoe, he was selead with symptoms of insanity, and taken to Jacksonville, to be placed under the medical care of the best talent in the State. Since then, up to a few days ago, he has being residually improving, and his friends expected that he would be able to come home and resume his business in a week or two. On Friday morning, however, intelligence was received that he was damperously sick, which was followed on Saturday morning by a dispatch announcing his death on the previous evening. His wife had left this city on Friday evening to join him, and ahe must have arrived there only a few hours subrequent to his decesse.

Mr. Wells was well known to the business commercial editor of the Chicago Duly Press, previous to its consolidation with the Tarburn—and the columns of that paper bear full testimony to his shulliny and faithfulness as a commercial journalist. Subsequent to that, he was the first Superintendent of the Chicago Board of Trade, and since then he has been solely engaged in editing and publishing the Duly Commercial Letter—an enterprise which the first Superintendent of the Chicago Board of Trade, and since then he has been solely engaged in editing and publishing the Duly Commercial Letter—an enterprise which the first Superintendent of the Chicago Board of Trade, and since then he has been solely engaged in editing and publishing the Duly Commercial Letter—an enterprise which the first Superintendent of the Chicago Board of Trade, and since then he has been solely engaged in editing and publishing the Duly Commercial Letter—an enterprise which the first Superintendent of the Chicago Board of Trade, and since then he has been solely engaged in editing and publishing the Duly Commercial Letter—an enterprise which the first Superintendent of our control of the Chicago Board of Trade, and since the new first the first superintendent of the Chicago Board of Trade, and s

As a statistician he had few equals, and his labors in this respect are daily of the highest value to the business men of our city. He was a graduate of Wabash

In public and private life, Mr. Wells bore a character—upright and honorable in his ngs and transactions, as well as amiable effectionate in the social circle. He leaves, surn his less, a most estimable wife and two children, besides a large circle of warm friends and acquaintances. At the time of his death he was aged thirty-eight years.
